The scene is a confession. The venue is the United States Coast Guard Academy. The speaker is Markwayne Mullin, a plumber by trade, a former United States Senator, now elevated to Secretary of Homeland Security—the very department founded on the ashes of the Israeli-facilitated 9/11 false flag. Beside him, on the same stage, behind the same pane of bulletproof glass, sits the Commander-in-Chief himself: Donald John Trump, a 34-count convicted felon, a five-time draft dodger, a documented Epstein associate, and a man who has never once in his life made a personal sacrifice for the nation he now claims to lead.

The entire stage is shielded by bulletproof glass. The President and his Homeland Security Secretary cannot stand before the young men and women of the Coast Guard without a protective barrier between them and the Americans they have looted, surveilled, and immiserated. The glass is the physical admission that the government knows it is guilty, knows the people have figured it out, and has no defense except to hide behind polycarbonate and pretend to be the victim.

I. THE PLUMBER WHO FORGOT HOW TO PLUMB

Markwayne Mullin is a licensed plumber. He holds an associate's degree in plumbing and a state plumbing license. He has zero military experience, zero law enforcement experience, and zero national security background. He now commands the third-largest federal agency, overseeing a $70 billion budget, the CISA drone grid, the FirstNet police-priority 5G network, the Palantir dragnet, and the 23,500 National Guard Title 32 Quick Reaction Force. He is a plumber who has been handed the levers of a domestic surveillance state.

"I play no games about who is my favorite out of the 22 components," he begins, as if the United States Coast Guard is a contestant on a reality television show. He is not addressing warriors. He is pandering to a captive audience of uniformed personnel who are required to sit in silence while their civilian masters perform.

II. THE FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE LIE

"I understand the Coast Guard, you're our first line of defense to protecting the homeland."

The Coast Guard is not the first line of defense. The Coast Guard is a maritime law enforcement and search-and-rescue service. It saves stranded boaters. It interdicts drug shipments. It maintains navigational aids. The first line of defense for the United States is electronic surveillance, satellite reconnaissance, and forward-deployed naval carrier strike groups that operate thousands of miles from the American coastline. By the time a hostile force reaches the Coast Guard's jurisdiction, it has already defeated the Navy, the Air Force, and the Marine Corps. The Coast Guard is the last line, not the first.

Mullin does not understand this because Mullin has never served. He does not know the difference between a carrier strike group and a buoy tender. He is a plumber who was handed a cabinet post because he is physically intimidating, morally pliable, and ideologically compliant. The "homeland" he invokes is a term that entered the American lexicon only after the September 11th attacks—attacks that the Superzar Pro archive has documented as an Israeli intelligence operation facilitated by the dancing Israelis, the foreknowledge of the Netanyahu government, and the subsequent installation of Michael Chertoff, the son of a Talmudic rabbi, as the second Secretary of Homeland Security. DHS was not created to protect America. DHS was created to surveil America. And Mullin now sits at its head.

III. THE PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH FRAUD

"And our president, our commander in chief, he believes in peace through strength."

The Commander-in-Chief is a five-time draft dodger. He avoided service in Vietnam with four student deferments and a fraudulent "heel spur" diagnosis that has never been explained. He has never worn the uniform. He has never faced enemy fire. He has never made a physical sacrifice for any human being other than himself. His "strength" is the strength of a man who dodges service, dodges taxes, dodges accountability, and dances to YMCA while the disabled are purged from SSDI.

Mullin calls him "commander in chief" as if the title is a magic incantation that transforms a fat, diaper-wearing, Epstein-associated felon into a warrior. It is not. The title is stolen. The valor is stolen. The entire presidency is a monument to fraud.

"But he also understands that not everybody believes in peace, and some people only respect strength."

Mullin is explaining what another man understands. He is not a translator. He is not a confidant. He is a plumber attempting to channel the inner thoughts of a narcissist who cannot form a coherent sentence without a teleprompter. The line is not an insight. It is a generic, focus-grouped political slogan designed to justify the illegal Iran war, the slaughter of 170 children at the Minab school, and the continued funding of a foreign genocide while the American social safety net is shredded.

The people who "only respect strength" are the very network Mullin serves. The Israeli-Irgun capture network respects nothing but power. It has no moral scruples, no regard for international law, and no allegiance to any nation except the pariah state occupying stolen land. Mullin is not warning the Coast Guard about foreign adversaries. He is describing his own masters.

IV. THE ONE PERCENT FRAUD

"You give our Commander-in-Chief the options because you're the one percenters."

This is the logic of a man who cannot count. There are approximately 1.3 million active-duty military personnel in the United States Armed Forces. There are over 18 million veterans. The Coast Guard comprises roughly 40,000 active-duty members. That is not one percent of the military. That is not one percent of the veteran population. That is barely one percent of the federal civilian workforce.

Mullin's "one percent" rhetoric is not mathematics. It is manipulation. He is attempting to make a small, specialized service branch feel uniquely valorized so that they will internalize the message and ignore the reality: the Commander-in-Chief they are being told to love is the same Commander-in-Chief who is gutting their VA benefits, starving the homeless veterans on their streets, and threatening to deploy the military against their own families under the Insurrection Act.

V. THE LOVE LIE

"And our Commander-in-Chief loves you for that."

Donald John Trump does not love anyone. He has never loved anyone. He cheated on all three of his wives. He paid a porn star $130,000 to conceal an affair while his third wife was pregnant with his fifth child. He called his own daughter a "piece of ass." He stiffs his contractors. He pardons confessed criminals and sends them to Paris as diplomats. He has never once, in his entire public life, uttered an unscripted expression of genuine affection for any human being other than himself.

The notion that Donald John Trump loves the men and women of the United States Coast Guard is an insult to the very concept of love. It is a lie so transparent that only a captured audience, compelled by military protocol to remain silent and seated, could possibly be expected to absorb it without vomiting.

VI. THE VERDICT

Markwayne Mullin is a fraud. He is a plumber playing soldier, a tough-guy performer hiding behind bulletproof glass, a Secretary of Homeland Security who does not know what the Coast Guard does, a defender of the Constitution who has never once challenged the capture network's systematic violation of every clause of that document. He is a human flare, deployed to absorb the public's attention while the IL-7 domestic drone grid expands, the CDR quota purge continues, and the Treasury is looted to fund Israeli F-35s.

The Coast Guard deserves better. The American people deserve better. The Constitution Mullin claims to defend is the very document he and his Commander-in-Chief have spent their entire careers eviscerating. Prison mandatory. No softening. The doors are off. The 110th exile is coming. The plumber, the draft-dodger, and the entire captured apparatus are going down together. The end.

Sec. Mullin introduces President Trump at the USCG Academy: "You're our first line of defense to protecting the homeland, and our president, our Commander-in-Chief, he believes in Peace Through Strength, but he also understands that not everybody believes in peace, and some people only respect strength—and because of the great men and women who sit in front of me today, you give our Commander-in-Chief the options."
